Province set to announce SE LRT funding

$1.8-billion project. Mill Woods-to-downtown line expected for 2020

 ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

The broad strokes of a provincial funding deal that should allow the city's southeast LRT project to move forward will be announced Tuesday, multiple sources have informed Metro.

Metro has learned the announcement will include approximately $250 million in eligible Green Trip funding, as well as a commitment to match $150 million the city hopes will be provided through the federal government's Building Canada program.

The province has scheduled an 11 a.m. press conference at the Churchill LRT station, a stone's throw from city hall, to announce the funding arrangement.

Premier Alison Redford, Finance Minister Doug Horner, Transportation Minister Wayne Drysdale, Municipal Affairs Minister Ken Hughes and several members of the Edmonton caucus are all listed as attending.

The remaining $200 million the city needs to move ahead with the project will come from the province, but no specifics were provided to Metro. That would complete the $600-million shortfall the city was hoping the province would fill.

The proposed line will run from Mill Woods to downtown and is estimated to cost a total of $1.8 billion. The city has committed $800 million to the project and the federal government has already committed $250 million through its Public-Private Partnership Canada Fund.

The city has been working with the province since last week's budget to get a deal together on the project, which city councillors have highlighted as the city's highest infrastructure priority.

Mayor Don Iveson made a direct pitch to Redford during last week's state of the city speech at the Shaw Conference Centre.

"Show that you understand the needs of the city in the same way that my council does," said Iveson. "Show Alberta's capital city that we're worth investing in."

The city was pushing for the commitment prior to April 30, so all the funds will be in place and the city can seek a contractor to take on the project and complete it by 2020.

The big melt. Drainage crews rushing to keep pace

As snow piles turn to small rivers across Edmonton, crews are working hard to keep them flowing and not pooling, according to the city.

The city's director of drainage operations Derek Melmoth said so far they have received about 280 calls from residents looking for help with flooding issues, but it's essentially a normal spring melt.

"We have resources for this and we will channel ours," he said. "I don't want to jump into an overtime scenario. I don't think it's warranted."

Melmoth said the warm weather in January, though unusual, helped considerably and now it's just a matter of re-opening frozen catch basins.

"I've lived in Edmonton all my life and I have never seen three weeks of extremely warm weather, but I'm glad it happened because it dropped a lot of the snow pack," he said.

Melmoth said while the city has crews, any aid residents can provide to get the water moving would help.

"If you can get out and pick out a little bit and open up your drain that's one of the best things; once water gets running towards those catch basins it carves a channel really quite quickly," he said.

Environment Canada is calling for warm weather throughout the rest of the week with a high of 10 C on Wednesday. Melmoth said these temperatures should clear most of the snow if they continue as forecast.

Hospital staff reveals dangerous conditions

Misericordia Hospital. Facility expected to resume full capacity after $19M funding

leah.germain@metronews.ca

Asbestos, dangerous amounts of mould and intense heat are just some of the concerns reported by staff at the Misericordia Community Hospital over the last two years, according to documents obtained by the Alberta New Democratic Party.

Spanning more than 230 pages, a thick stack of hospital complaint records were released under the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act on Monday.

"There's a serious problem at the Misericordia Hospital," said NDP MLA David Eggen Monday. "We have literally hundreds of documented incidences where this hospital is inadequate from top to bottom."

Detailing concerns about elevators breaking down and leaks from the sewage drainage system in both the east and west wings of the hospital, the document covers concerns placed by Misericordia staff from January 2012 to December 2013.

"This sort of thing is unacceptable," Eggen said.

After the province announced $19 million in funding for upgrades and repairs to Edmonton-area hospitals in the latest budget, Eggen said a quick fix isn't enough and the government needs to consider building a new hospital.

"Obviously people are working there every day. It's a... highly used hospital and we need to make it safe and functional for patients and staff," he said.

According to Covenant Health spokesperson Charlene Morrison, the hospital will be able to resume full capacity this year thanks to the $19.2 million funding from the province.

"By the end of March and early April we expect the two

Conditions

According to the documents, at one point there has been more than 120 asbestos sites in the hospital along with mould in a mechanical room 10 times the level considered safe, requiring staff to wear personal protection gear when accessing the room.

units that were off-site (due to flooding in May last year) to come back on-site," she said, noting flooding from last May that forced 50 patients to be relocated to the Royal Alexandra Hospital.

Galleria not funded in provincial budget

Downtown Arts Centre. University of Alberta proposed as a major tenant in development

ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

The applause is on hold at the proposed Downtown Arts Centre as the provincial budget came and went without any funding to move the project forward.

The centre proposed last year would include new theatres and an outdoor Galleria, as well as a new office tower in the area near the Royal Alberta Museum.

The foundation behind the project is hoping the University of Alberta can be a tenant in the new project, but there was no provincial money for it yet.

Parker Hogan, spokesperson for the Minister of Infrastructure, said the province was aware of the project, but has yet to comment.

"There have been discussions that have happened between the foundation and our minister and other ministers in government, but those are discussions," he said.

Hogan said currently there's no funding for the project.

"You can look at every line in the capital plan and you won't find it in the capital plan," he said.

Godfrey Huybregts, a spokesperson for the arts centre project, said they didn't necessarily expect to have an announcement in the provincial budget.

He said the group is still working with the province on the project, but for now they can't say much.

"Those discussions obviously have to be private for the moment," he said.

The foundation was hoping to begin construction soon in order to open for 2017, but Huybregts said he was unsure how this would affect the timetable.

In a statement, the University of Alberta said they remain committed to the project.

"The university continues to be very supportive of the project and we look forward to further discussion on how to move the project forward," said provost Carl G. Amrhein.

Edmonton Centre

Veteran Tory MP ready to retire

A veteran Conservative MP from Edmonton says he won't seek re-election.

Laurie Hawn will continue serving the Edmonton Centre riding until the next federal election and then will retire from politics. The former Royal Canadian Air Force fighter pilot has represented the area since 2006.

"It's just time," Hawn told a CHED radio talk show Monday. "When I got into it back then, my aim was to serve for eight to 10 years."

"When October 2015 comes around, it will be nine years and nine months. I'm not comparing myself to the Great One, but 99 is always a good Edmonton number," he said, referring to the number Wayne Gretzky wore when he played for the National Hockey League Oilers.

During his time in office, he spent three and a half years as parliamentary secretary to the minister of national defence.

Hawn has said one of the high points of his time as an MP was visiting Canadian troops serving in Afghanistan.

Explore the city's pedways through Pedcrawl

Members of the Edmonton Wayfinding Project want people to explore the city's pedway system this Friday for Pedcrawl. METRO FILE

What happens when you mix bar-hopping and Edmonton's pedway system together? You get the first ever Pedcrawl.

Launching this Friday, event organizers with Harcourt House and The Edmonton Wayfinding Project aim to introduce people to the city's indoor sidewalk system while visiting local businesses.

Organizers also hope to start a conversation about some of the pros and cons of the pedway system.

"We wanted to show pedways can be used for fun," said Connor Buchanan, exhibitions co-ordinator with Harcourt House.

With 60 minutes planned for each of the five downtown locations, organizers want to get people talking about the wayfinding situation in Edmonton while also doing a scavenger hunt.

The idea for the event came after Jackie Lee met with a friend one evening.

Lee later opted to drive two blocks instead of using the unknown pedway system.

"I saw a lack of wayfinding signs in Edmonton and saw a need to do something about it," said Lee.

The Edmonton Wayfinding Project has a second installation at Harcourt House where people can post famous quotes from philosophers or wayfinding professionals.

The Pedcrawl event is free.

Guests are only required to pay for any food or drinks they order when visiting the five locations.

Pedcrawl starts at 7 p.m. at the AGA pedway entrance, with everyone over 18 welcome. For more information, search PEDCRAWL!!! on Facebook.

Java fix

Transcend Coffee to open third location

The Mercer Warehouse will once again be filled with the smell of brewing java as Transcend Coffee readies to move into the building.

The decision to open a coffee shop in the building came after Mercer building tenants were looking for a caffeine fix to fill the void left by Roast Coffeehouse and Wine Bar.

"It's an opportunity to get back downtown and it's a good fit for us," said Poul Mark, founder of Transcend Coffee. Owners expect to open the doors to the 30-seat space in early summer.

Education. Crowdfunding gives University of Alberta phys-ed program a boost

After 14 successful years, one University of Alberta program is being taken to the next level thanks to new support from crowdfunding.

Co-ordinators for Play Around the World — a three-month placement for students studying physical education to travel to either Asia or northern Canada — are hoping the crowdfunding initiative will get people better acquainted with their program and partners.

"It taps into a wider range of people and I think people who are interested in the cause and not only interested in supporting student learning at the U of A, but also supporting agencies we serve," said Mary Ann Rintoul, Play Around the World co-ordinator.

Sending students to Cambodia, Thailand and the Northwest Territories, Play Around the World offers students a chance to deliver, play and offer physical activity to children of all abilities, Rintoul explained.

Jacque Kingston has gone on two tours with Play Around the World to Cambodia, once as a student and once as a leader.

"It was nothing I expected, but everything I wanted and needed," Kingston said about the project.

"All of the funds really do go to the projects and communities we serve in Thailand, Cambodia and Canada," she added. "We are looking to share our experiences and students bring back those experiences."

Conference

World Economic Forum appears off

With just over six weeks to go before Alberta is to host global leaders at a World Economic Forum event, there is confusion over whether it will go ahead.

Cal Dallas, minister for Intergovernmental Affairs, said Monday that the gathering in Lake Louise could still go ahead as planned on April 24-25.

Or, he said, it might not. "We're not ruling out any possibilities," Dallas said in response to reports the hotel in Lake Louise has already released the rooms and that the World Economic Forum is not advertising the event on its website.

There was no reply to an email sent to the organization requesting comment.

The conference was billed as bringing together 100 leaders to talk about energy and environmental sustainability and to come up with suggestions to better inform future World Economic Forum discussions.

Edmonton poets take to brothel

Poetry Brothel. Paying customers receive one-on-one readings

Most brothels don't accept by-donation payments, but Edmonton's first-ever Poetry Brothel is always happy to oblige for whatever a customer can afford.

Described as an intimate night of spoken-word and literary poetry, the city's Poetry Brothel connects local scribes with paying customers for a one-on-one reading.

Morgan Smith, creator of Edmonton's Poetry Brothel, first got the idea from similar brothels held in New York.

"I realized Edmonton has a very interesting spoken-word and poetry scene," said Smith, who hosts the event every few months at Wunderbar Hofbrauhaus.

The event, which features music and entertainment, is centred on poets who give one-on-one poetry readings with paying customers.

Now with an official Edmonton branch, Smith said the brothels encourage poets to take on new identities or personas to act out different characters.

"It's just a unique way to get music and dance and burlesque all under the same roof as poetry and to get people more intimately involved in listening to poetry," Smith said, noting that they want to break down any preconceived notions people have of poetry.

"I think people look at poetry as sort of an ivory-tower art form."

Liam Coady, a local spoken-word poet and one of Edmonton's poetry brothel staples, said he was first interested in the connotation surrounding a brothel.

"It's about the poetry," Coady said. "It's about creating an environment where intimate poetry readings can happen."

As a spoken-word poet, Coady said his poems are always evolving and he continues to present them in different ways.

"It's a performance and at the end of the day I don't always know the best way to perform my poems," he said.

Heroin a 'public health crisis'. First responders should carry antidote: U.S. attorney general

U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder on Monday called an increase in heroin-related deaths an "urgent and growing public health crisis" and said first responders should carry with them a drug that can reverse the effects of an overdose.

The video message posted on the Justice Department's website reflects the federal government's concern about the growing prevalence of heroin and prescription painkillers. The number of overdose deaths involving heroin increased by 45 per cent between 2006 and 2010, according to the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy.

"Addiction to heroin and other opiates, including certain prescription painkillers, is impacting the lives of Americans in every state, in every region, and from every background and walk of life — and all too often, with deadly results," Holder said in the message.

His public support for an antidote that could be used to rescue overdosing drug users mirrors the position of the White House drug policy office, which has also urged all first responders to have the medication on hand. At least 17 states, including Washington, D.C., allow naloxone — commonly known by the brand name Narcan — to be distributed to the public, and bills are pending in some states to increase access to it.

U of O research finds grounded science in out-of-body experience

Researchers at the University of Ottawa have found unusual brain activity that could be linked to the feeling of an out-of-body experience. CONTRIBUTED

Claude Messier, a researcher at the University of Ottawa

University of Ottawa. Researchers conducted a study on a woman who can voluntarily have an out-of-body experience

LUCY SCHOLEY
Metro in Ottawa

An out-of-body experience might sound like something from a paranormal movie or a religious cult, but a pair of researchers from the University of Ottawa have the science to back the curious case.

Claude Messier and Andrea Smith conducted a study on a woman who can voluntarily have an out-of-body experience. It had become common practice for the 24-year-old, who said she started doing it when she was a child to help her fall asleep.

Messier and Smith conducted functional MRI scans of the woman while in this state and found that there's brain activity linked to the feeling of being lifted out of one's body or seeing one's body while outside of it. They had her imagine she was doing jumping jacks or roll over while in this out-of-body state.

Normally, when one imagines doing jumping jacks, both sides of the brain are active. But in this woman's out-of-body state, the scanned images showed activity predominately on the left side of the brain.

"That was a cue to us that we were just doing something different than just regular imagery," said Messier.

"It was a bit of a surprise and we certainly didn't expect anything special," he said, adding that they tested her twice. "We were a bit unsure, skeptical, that this was actually happening."

This woman was an interesting case, said Messier, because most people have out-of-body experiences following a traumatic event or drug use. While typically frightening — especially for those experiencing them for the first time — this woman was able to do it on her own terms.

Since this study was published, Messier said he's heard from other people who say they can voluntarily have out-of-body experiences. He's also seen blog articles that link this study to religion or paranormal activity, but he said those are misleading.

"There's science that backs the idea that the brain generates our body image and that changes in the brain, very often pathological, can induce the out-of-body experience," he said.

South Sudan. Protesters denounce UN after weapons found in truck

Hundreds of young South Sudanese men marched in protest of the United Nations on Monday following the discovery of landmines inside a UN truck that was marked as carrying food.

The rally participants marched through the city and shouted slogans of support for President Salva Kiir while also denouncing Hilde Johnson, the top UN official in the country. Protesters accused Johnson of supplying arms to rebels fighting South Sudan's government.

"The transport of cargo of general goods belonging to the Ghanaian battalion (was) on its way to Bentiu. Several containers were wrongly labelled and inadvertently contained weapons and ammunition," said UN spokeswoman Ariane Quentier.

Security report

An internal UN security situation report over the week-end said the government impounded 12 UN trucks.

The discovery — as well as a video showing guns and landmines taken from the UN trucks that has been making the rounds on social media — has fuelled even more skepticism of the UN here. Anti-UN sentiment began growing in January when President Kiir described the organization as a "parallel government" and ardent supporter of rebels.

Quentier declined to comment further on Monday and the UN has not explained why its soldiers would need landmines. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ordeal ends for abducted nuns

Syrian militants released a group of Greek Orthodox nuns Monday in exchange for dozens of women held in government prisons — a rare deal between Damascus and al-Qaida-linked rebels that was mediated by Qatari and Lebanese officials.

The dramatic scene of the nuns being freed from vehicles in the dead of night along the Lebanese-Syrian border, bidding their captors a surprisingly friendly farewell, ended the women's three-month ordeal.

The nuns were captured as opposition fighters overran a Christian village and were held in a border town. They were released as government-backed forces battled their way into the strategic border town in which they were held.

The 13 women said they were treated well by their captors, members of the al-Qaida-affiliated Nusra Front. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Russia to counter U.S. proposal for Ukraine

Geopolitical crisis. Minister says nation almost in state of war

Russia said Monday it is drafting counterproposals to a U.S. plan for a negotiated solution to the Ukraine crisis, denouncing the new Western-backed government as an unacceptable "fait accompli" and claiming that Russian-leaning parts of the country have been plunged into lawlessness.

The Kremlin moves came as Russian forces strengthened their control over Crimea, less than a week before the region is to hold a contentious referendum on whether to split off and become part of Russia.

In a televised briefing with President Vladimir Putin, Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov said proposals made by U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry are "not suitable" because they take "the situation created by the coup as a starting point," referring to the ouster of Ukraine's pro-Kremlin president, Viktor Yanukovich.

Referring to a document he received from Kerry explaining the U.S. view of the situation in Ukraine, Lavrov said: "Everything was stated in terms of allegedly having a conflict between Russia and Ukraine, and in terms of accepting the fait accompli," he said.

Lavrov said Kerry delayed a visit to Moscow to discuss the situation, and Russia had decided to prepare new proposals of its own, though he did not say what they were.

But in Washington, State Department officials said that it was Russia's refusal to discuss the American proposals that was hurting prospects for a negotiated solution — in particular, the idea of direct talks between Russian officials and those of the new Ukrainian government.

Meanwhile, Ukraine's foreign minister said Monday that his country was practically in a state of war with Russia, whose forces have effectively taken control over the Crimean Peninsula in what has become Europe's greatest geopolitical crisis since the end of the Cold War.

"We have to admit that our life now is almost like ... a war," said Foreign Minister Andrii Deshchysya. "We have to cope with an aggression that we do not understand."

Deshchysya said Ukraine is counting on help from the West. Prime Minister Arseniy Yatsenyuk is to meet with President Barack Obama in Washington on Wednesday.

On Monday, the Russian Foreign Ministry denounced the lawlessness it said "now rules in eastern regions of Ukraine as a result of the actions of fighters of the so-called 'Right Sector,' with the full connivance" of Ukraine's new authorities.

'You can't get any more evil': Killer's dad

Newtown massacre.

Peter Lanza breaks his silence more than a year after his son killed 20 first-graders and six educators

In his most extensive comments about the 2012 Connecticut school massacre, the father of gunman Adam Lanza describes his struggle to comprehend what his son did — an act that “couldn’t get any more evil” — and how he now wishes that his son had never been born.

Peter Lanza also told The New Yorker magazine that he believes Adam would have killed him, too, if he had the chance. And he often contemplates what he could have done differently in his relationship with Adam, although he believes the killings couldn’t have been predicted.

“Any variation on what I did and how my relationship was had to be good, because no outcome could be worse,” Peter Lanza said. “You can’t get any more evil.... How much do I beat up on myself about the fact that he’s my son? A lot.”

He said he hadn’t seen his son in two years when Adam killed 20 first-graders and six educators at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown in December 2012. Adam killed himself as police arrived. He earlier fatally shot his mother, Nancy, in their Newtown home.

The interviews are Peter Lanza’s first public comments since he released a statement the day after the massacre expressing sympathy for the victims’ families and puzzlement over his son’s actions.

Peter Lanza believes his son had no affection for him at the time of the shootings.

“With hindsight, I know Adam would have killed me in a heartbeat, if he’d had the chance. I don’t question that for a minute,” he told the magazine. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Alzheimer's. Senior lived with husband's body, did not realize he was dead

An elderly woman who suffers from Alzheimer's disease lived with her husband's body for a month after he died not realizing what happened, authorities said Monday.

The body of Jesse Kirby, 76, was discovered Friday in his bed when police went to the home in Decatur, Ala., to check on the couple. Living inside the house was his wife, Doris Kirby, 78, who was hospitalized after the discovery.

The man apparently died of natural causes in his sleep about four weeks ago.

The door was closed to the bedroom where the man died. Police saw the man's body through a window. Two dogs that apparently died of starvation were found in the bedroom.

The coroner said the man has two children, but neither realized what had happened because the Kirbys were “sort of loners.”

The children, who are grown, believed the man was taking care of the couple's needs, he said.

Pistorius trial continues with graphic testimony about girlfriend's wounds

Pretoria. Amputee athlete vomits in courtroom as Reeva Steenkamp's gunshot wounds are described

Oscar Pistorius vomited in the dock and retched repeatedly and loudly at his murder trial Monday as he heard graphic details of the injuries sustained by the girlfriend he shot, including a head wound that was probably instantly fatal, according to the pathologist who performed her autopsy.

Reeva Steenkamp was shot with bullets designed to expand on impact and cause maximum damage, Prof. Gert Saayman testified after he identified the type of bullet from fragments in Steenkamp's skull.

Saayman also gave his expert opinion on how long

Oscar Pistorius buries his head in his hand as he listens to questioning during his trial Monday in Pretoria, South Africa, regarding the events surrounding the shooting death of his girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp. BONGIWE MCHUNU/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/POOL before she died Steenkamp last ate, by the food contents in her stomach. He estimated that it wouldn't have been more than two hours before she died. That appeared to contradict Pistorius's version that suggests the couple had eaten and were in bed by 10 p.m. Steenkamp was shot after 3 a.m.

Saayman's testimony was not broadcast or reported live on Twitter by journalists because of its explicit content under an order from Judge Thokozile Masipa. However, journalists were allowed to report the testimony without directly quoting the witness's words.

As the double-amputee runner, hunched over on a bench, vomited as he heard the description of Steenkamp's wounds, Masipa briefly halted the testimony to ask chief defence lawyer Barry Roux to attend to his client.

The judge also asked whether Pistorius was able to understand the proceedings. Roux said Pistorius's reaction was not going to change. A bucket was placed at his feet.

After court adjourned for the day, Pistorius sat for a few minutes with his hands over his ears and his body heaving and bent forward as his brother held a hand on his back.

Pistorius, the first amputee to run in the Olympics, is charged with premeditated murder for the shooting death of 29-year-old Steenkamp before dawn on Feb. 14, 2013.

Pistorius, 27, says the killing was accidental because he thought his girlfriend was a dangerous intruder when he shot her through the door of a toilet cubicle in his home.

Snowden speaks at SXSW tech conference

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

NSA leaker Edward Snowden called for public oversight of U.S. intelligence programs during a web-streamed speech at SXSW Interactive Monday, one of the most anticipated segments of the technology conference. Snowden, appearing remotely from Russia where he remains in exile, urged attendees to take more control over how the various intelligence agencies interact with citizens. The speech marked the first time Snowden has addressed U.S. citizens directly since going into exile.

"South by Southwest and the tech community, the people in the room in Austin, they're the folks who can fix this," Snowden said. "We need public oversight, some way for trusted public figures to advocate for us. We need a watchdog that watches Congress, because if we're not informed, we can't consent to these policies."

When asked by an attendee if he had any regrets about his decision to leak classified NSA documents, Snowden replied that he would "absolutely" do it again.

"Regardless of what happens to me, this is something that we had the right to do," he said, a copy of the U.S. Constitution serving as his backdrop. "I took an oath to support and defend the Constitution. And I saw the Constitution was being violated on a massive scale."

While the speech drew generally positive responses from the crowd, it had been preceded by criticism and controversy, with Rep. Mike Pompeo urging the conference in an open letter to cancel the event, calling Snowden a traitor and common criminal.

Snowden's speech was viewed by 3,000 conference attendees filling the main auditorium at the Austin Convention Center. Two overflow rooms had been set up by the conference, with the speech also streamed live by the Texas Tribune.

Travel agents questioned over stolen passports

Missing Malaysia Airlines plane. Search effort widened to find the vanished jet Authorities questioned travel agents Monday at a beach resort in Thailand about two men who boarded the vanished Malaysia Airlines plane with stolen passports, part of a growing international investigation into what they were doing on the flight.

Nearly three days after the Boeing 777 with 239 people on board disappeared en route from Kuala Lumpur to Beijing, no debris has been seen in Southeast Asian waters.

Five passengers who checked in for Flight MH370 didn't board the plane, and their luggage was removed from it, Malaysian authorities said. Malaysian Transport Minister Hishammuddin Hussein said this also was being investigated, but he didn't say whether this was suspicious.

The search effort, involving at least 34 aircraft and 40 ships from several countries, was being widened to a 185-kilometre radius from the point the plane vanished from radar screens between Malaysia and Vietnam early Saturday with no distress signal.

Possible causes of the apparent crash include an explosion, catastrophic engine failure, terrorist attack, extreme turbulence, pilot error or even suicide, according to experts, many of whom cautioned against speculation because so little is known.

New research. Elephants can discern among languages, gender: Study

Wild elephants can distinguish between human languages, and they can tell whether a voice comes from a man, woman or boy, a new study says.

That's what researchers found when they played recordings of people for elephants in Kenya. Scientists say this is an advanced thinking skill that other animals haven't shown. It lets elephants figure out who is a threat and who isn't.

The result shows that while humans are studying elephants, the clever animals are also studying people and drawing on their famed powers of memory, said study author Karen McComb.

"Basically they have developed this very rich knowledge of the humans that they share their habitat with," said McComb, a professor of animal behaviour and cognition at the University of Sussex in England.

The study was released Monday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Black Twitter gains followers online, IRL

Trending. The modern twist on the barbershop 'brings the fullness of black humanity into the social network'

When a U.S. jury convicted Michael Dunn of attempted murder, but not actual murder, in the shooting death of a black teenager, the hashtag #dangerousblackkids popped up on Twitter. Users posted photos of black babies and toddlers, making fun of the fear that Dunn testified he felt before opening fire on a car full of teens at a convenience store.

That hashtag was the calling card of Black Twitter, a small corner of the social media giant where an unabashedly black spin on life gets served up in 140-character instalments.

Péladeau. Media baron's political jump raises media-coverage concerns

The day after media tycoon Pierre Karl Péladeau's plunge into provincial politics, he's earning considerable praise in the pages of Quebec's most-read newspaper — one he happens to own.

Columns in the flagship paper of Péladeau's empire described the Parti Québécois candidate as a magnificent catch, a game-changer for Premier Pauline Marois and bad news for supporters of Canadian unity.

Several opinion writers in Monday's Le Journal de Montréal also said Péladeau delivers instant credibility to the pro-independence PQ as it tries to beef up its economic chops.

Péladeau stunned the province Sunday by announcing he would run alongside Marois to help the PQ win a majority mandate in the April 7 election.

The media baron's new career is raising concerns about his media company's influence on political coverage in Quebec — even though Péladeau has resigned as vice-chairman of Quebecor Media Inc.

He's insisted his media outlets would maintain independent coverage.

Péladeau says he will retain his ownership stake in the company and place his investments in a blind trust.

Monday's Le Journal de Montréal featured a front-page photo of Péladeau and a half-dozen columns that discussed Péladeau's high-profile candidacy.

THERE SHOULDN'T BE AN APP FOR THAT

Are you a terrible boyfriend? Well guess what, now there's an app for that.

The newly released BroApp promises to deliver an automated message to your girlfriend once a day so you can spend more time with your "bros." That's right, digitally savvy dudes, you can now outsource your relationship to your cellphone for the bargain price of just $1.99.

Users have the option to craft their own customized sweet-nothings or select from a pre-programmed list of grammatically incorrect and cringe-worthy greetings such as "Hi darl, how did you go today?" and "Hey babe, what's doing with you today?"

I'm sorry, but are we to assume that the modern man is so incredibly inept at multitasking that he can't remember to take 10 seconds out of his bro-filled day of fist-bumping and beer-chugging to show some affection towards the person he is romantically interested in? Seriously?

Presumably a "girlfriend" is someone with whom you'd like to cultivate a meaningful emotional and physical relationship. If this is a woman you'd like to share your life with, go to dinner with and have sex with, shouldn't you at least have the decency to communicate with her directly rather than relying on some sort of digital proxy to do it for you?

Furthermore, do the tech wizards over at BroApp presume the girlfriends of the world are so insecure that they just can't bear to go more than 24 hours without hearing from their man?

Spoiler alert, guys: Women aren't just sitting around brushing our hair and waiting for you to finish hanging out with your buddies so you can lavish us with attention. We actually have a lot of stuff going on: jobs to do, people to see, Pilates classes to attend and Netflix shows to binge-watch. Sure it'd be nice to receive a sweet text message from you during the day, but we're not desperately clutching our phones and waiting with bated breath for you to grace us with a lacklustre "Sup?"

There's no faking sincere dialogue and there's a good chance your girlfriend is going to be able to tell the difference between a hand-crafted message from her human boyfriend and BroApp's impersonal scripted greetings.

Checking in with your significant other isn't an annoying chore to contract out to a computerized mobile wingman. So if you're actually considering taking the time to download this app and hand-pick your preferred lazy-boy-friend messages, then for goodness' sake just pick up the phone and have an actual conversation.

Or better yet, use that $1.99 to take your lady friend out for a cup of coffee and engage in some old-fashioned face-to-face communication.

Inside Llewyn Davis

Directors. Joel Coen, Ethan Coen

Stars. Oscar Isaac, Carey Mulligan, John Goodman

The Coen Bros.' uncanny evocation of the 1961 New York City folk music scene, starring Oscar Isaac as a striving troubadour, makes for a wistful, wryly humorous and unforgettable film. The whims of fate and vagaries of artistic success have never been so clearly defined, or so musically.

Isaac is the title folkie, loosely based on the late Dave Van Ronk, who doesn't know a hurricane named Bob Dylan is about to shake up not only his narcissistic existence but also the entire music scene.

Actor/singer Isaac gets fine support from Carey Mulligan as a woman wronged, John Goodman and F. Murray Abraham as splashes of cold water to half-flidded eyes, and a persistent tabby that is one cool cat.

It was my pick for the best film of 2013. And there's a great soundtrack, produced by T Bone Burnett. Extras include a making-of featurette and the feature-length concert film Another Day, Another Time: Celebrating the Music of Inside Llewyn Davis. PETER HOWELL

YA has got it Half Bad and that's good for new author

Working its magic.
Debut novel that bucks futuristic dystopian trend casts potent spell

EMILY LAURENCE
Metro World News

Before its release last week, Sally Green's book Half Bad had already been sold in 45 countries, turned into a trilogy and optioned for a movie being produced by Karen Rosenfelt, who was responsible for Twilight, The Book Thief and Percy Jackson: Sea of Monsters. Oh, and it's her first book.

If you're already completely over The Hunger Games and need something to hold you over until Divergent hits theatres, this is it.

Half Bad is about a 16-year-old boy named Nathan who lives in a cage and is being trained to kill. Living among humans are witches — some purely good and some horrendously evil — with Nathan's father being the worst of the worst. To survive, Nathan needs to escape his keepers, find his father and receive three gifts that will bring him his own magical powers.

Bucking the trend of YA novels set in a futuristic dystopian time, Half Bad is set in modern-day England. "The book is (dystopian) in a way, but to be honest I never really believed it was going to be published, so my idea was just to write the book I would want to read if I was 15 or 16," Green tells us. "It wasn't in my mind about what the market needed or didn't need."

Interestingly, when Green began writing she had a very different novel in mind: "Initially, it was a completely different story about a girl who didn't know she was a witch." She did, however, always plan on writing a trilogy. "My original idea was for the White Witches to be assumed good and Black Witches assumed to be bad."

"Originally, I had Nathan living in a White Witch world in book one and you would think the White Witches were going to be good. When you move to book two, the Black Witch world, you see the witches in an entirely new way. And then the third book would tie it all together. But actually, it didn't work out like that," Green reveals.

As far as the movie goes, Green guesses the cast will be mostly unknown actors, although she has two dream people in mind: "To play Marcus, I would love George Clooney, but it would be the mean George Clooney, like in From Dusk Till Dawn. And Gabriel, the Black Witch that appears in the end of the book, is definitely Aidan Turner, who was in the latest Hobbit movies. He's gorgeous," she says.

Green is at work on the second book, which she says is much more daunting than writing the first. "I didn't even know the first one was going to be published. I was writing it mainly for myself," she says. "Now I have a deadline and an audience that I have to keep happy. The blank page in the beginning (for the second book) was a bit nerve-racking. I was in a bit of a panic to get the first words down," she says. "After the first 10,000 words, then I relaxed into it."

"I never really believed it was going to be published, so my idea was just to write the book I would want to read if I was 15 or 16."

Loose-lipped Harmon lays it all on the line

Harmontown.

Community creator felt some serious dread unveiling his candid new doc at South by Southwest

Metro World News in Austin

After Community creator Dan Harmon was forced off his sitcom, he hit the road, taking his podcast on a 20-city tour with documentary filmmaker Neil Berkeley in tow. Now that trip is the warts-and-all documentary Harmontown, which premiered at SXSW this weekend. Harmon, who is now back running Community, sat down with Metro for an appropriately candid chat.

So you saw the film with an audience last night. Now that it's the morning after, what's your take on that experience?

I'm absolutely relieved. I don't do a lot of things in my life where there's delayed gratification or delayed effect, and this is one of the very few things in 41 years that I've spent a year or more anticipating — sometimes with a lot of dread, sometimes just with impatience, but all the time just living in a world where I'm out of control of something. It's a relief to move from a world where nobody has seen this movie to a world where people have seen it, because now that's over. I think it's a very interesting movie.

Spencer Crittenden, Jeff Bryan Davis, Dan Harmon and Erin McGathy in Harmontown. CONTRIBUTED

because I'm a narcissist. Even if other people don't like it or do like it, the great thing is that it's not looming any more and I don't have to worry about that part.

As the tour was happening I was curious, did you ever get any pressure to be less candid? Like, "Maybe don't tell everyone about all of that."

There's always those voices. Usually they are people that are paid to help me. Believe it or not, I have a publicist — imagine how insane that job is. I've always been very regretful about the fact that the people who rely on me and care about me can actually be let down or victimized or frightened by my motormouth, but at the same time, there's a worse version of me, and that's a version of me that bothers to be strategic, and political and diplomatic. In the best case scenario, that's a use-less version of me. In the worst case scenario that's a more effective version of me who gets terrible things done. The way that my brain is shaped, it's best for there to be a valve on it that runs to my mouth, because it keeps me humble in the long run and there's people who like it. I think that the people whose job it is to call me and say "Hey, can you cool it," they've learned by now that the answer is no, I can't.

When you were coming up as a writer, did you think, "I might have fans? Fans specifically of me, not just the shows I work on?"

I've always been just a rampant narcissist, always fascinated with myself, always just wanted attention, but at the same time I've always loved writing for people, trying to make them like me. It's actually unfortunate in Community's case, that my name is ever soiling that territory. Community is its own thing, has its own personality, which is a very loveable one and an important one. Community is a hero worth saving and worth being enamored with, and I'm the guy that makes that the product, but I am not a hero worth saving, I am not worth, like, actual romantic feelings on the part of a fan. But what I may be is either a cautionary tale or an interesting exhibit for other narcissists or people who feel embarrassed about what's going on in their heads. It is a bummer for me, I wish I could pull a lever that made a wall go up between my identity and this thing that I love making called Community.

Now that you've debuted Harmontown at SXSW, what is the plan for the film?

I'm not even sure. I mean,

Community

"The way that my brain is shaped, it's best for there to be a valve on it that runs to my mouth, because it keeps me humble in the long run and there's people who like it. I think that the people whose job it is to call me and say 'Hey, can you cool it,' they've learned by now that the answer is no, I can't."

Dan Harmon

I know that if nothing else, there's a fan base that would love to just be able to download it and just watch it. So if we can just make it available to them for a small fee it will very quickly recoup the investment I represented. As long as it pays for itself, I won't be embarrassed about it. It'll be something we did that was worthwhile.

And what about developing new shows?

I have these two impulses: One is that I'm constantly fantasizing about never working again. I'm constantly fantasizing about focusing only on Rick and Morty. And then I'm constantly also fantasizing about all the cool stuff I could do while the iron's still hot. If I go into a room at FX tomorrow, then I'm going to walk out all excited about something. And I'm going to end up trying really hard to get something on the air that will run contradictory to this part of me that fantasizes about taking a break, temporary or permanent. So I don't really know. Every plan I've ever made always ends up sucking. So I guess I'll just have to be organic and impulsive about what happens next.

My mentor is really fun and smart. She makes me feel happy.

Fun and smart aren't requirements. ☺
Just the desire to help a child feel happy.

New Order of the day: Laughing on other side of Your Silent Face

Strike up the band. Singer Bernard Sumner excited to be working on new New Order material

Metro World News

New Order singer Bernard Sumner speaks like he doesn't think people know his band very well. Sumner is participating in the 24th Annual Tibet House Benefit at Carnegie Hall on Tuesday night, a concert where-in organizer Philip Glass pairs prominent musicians together to collaborate.

"The whole focus is collaboration, so we are going to do a version of a New Order song called Your Silent Face," he says, as if the song he mentions isn't a bona fide synth pop classic. "A string arranger over here in the U.K. called Joe Duddell has done an arrangement with it and a poet called Mike Garry has written a poem about our ex label boss, Tony Wilson, who was the boss of Factory Records, who passed away, unfortunately."

Does Sumner not understand that 24 Hour Party People, the docudrama about Factory Records and all of its charges, is required viewing for any self-respecting music journalist? Instead of interrupting to remind him of this, we let him continue to discuss the other plans New Order have for collaboration.

"Philip is going to play on it," he says of Glass, "and Scorchio String Quartet are going to play on it, and we're going to do a collaboration with Iggy as well."

The last kernel of information he seems especially excited about. He doesn't feel compelled to even share that the Iggy in question is Iggy Pop, he of the eternally shirtless persuasion; he of The Stooges and the onstage self-mutilation. He whom Sumner met once in the 1980s when New Order were arguably a bigger concert draw than Iggy Pop. But even when he met Iggy, more than 25 years ago, he didn't assume the elder statesman of punk would know him or his band.

"I've been a massive fan of Iggy's from the early days of Joy Division," he gushes. "I shook his hand once! A

Album or series of EPs in the works

"We've written about 14 ideas, seven of those ideas I've got vocals on now, so we're quite a way on our way. The debate within the band is whether to release it as a series of EPs or an album."

friend was a roadie for him. I was a bit inebriated at the time. I was so pleased to meet him that I got really drunk, I got drunk as his show went on. I didn't even say it was me, I just said hello like a fan. Then I went back to my hotel, which was in Los Angeles, and the hotel had left a box of chocolates on my pillow — a whole box — and I remember I was drinking tequila that night, and it seemed like a good idea to eat the full box of chocolates on a gut full of tequila. I was rather ill the next day."

Speaking of ill, New Order founding bassist Peter

Hook has recently been in the news for speaking ill of Sumner, telling a U.K. website that he believes his former bandmate couldn't stand playing small clubs, so he revived New Order and played greatest hits to make a quick buck.

Sumner proudly beams that the band has actually been working on new material.

"We've written about 14 ideas, seven of those ideas I've got vocals on now, so we're quite a way on our way," he says. "The debate within the band is whether to release it as a series of EPs or an album."

Joyless division

When asked the band's official stance on Peter Hook, Sumner sighs. The latest round of critical words from Hook are not the first that the bassist has shared with the press.

- "At the end of the day, he left the band. It's as simple as that," says Sumner. "He obviously wanted to do his own thing, which at the time was as a celebrity DJ and then he formed the band Freebass. So of course we've got to respect that, and we wish him all the best, really."

Is the Golf Channel ready for Johnny and Tara?

With their sassy, on-point figure skating commentary, drool-worthy couture and adorable Instagram posts (they love to spoon!), Johnny Weir and Tara Lipinski took the Olympics by storm — again.

"I think we were both happily surprised (by the attention)," Lipinski told Metro at a kickoff for the Paralympic Winter Games in New York City. "We were the rookies and we had to prove ourselves, so it was really nice to come home and see the reception that we got."

The pros were "in a bubble" during their time in Sochi, Weir says, so they didn't really know about the positive reaction to their work until they returned home.

"We didn't think anyone was watching, and there's a brilliance to being a bit naive to what's going on," he says. "It's very liberating."

And figure skating's most fabulous duo have no plans to slow down now. The two did Oscars coverage for NBC and hope to be commentators at the Winter Olympics four years from now ("We'll have to see," Lipinski says). They're also ready and willing to offer their insight on other matters.

"We have an opinion about everything," Weir says. "Despite being figure skaters and knowing what we're talking about specifically, we've got opinions on a lot. So show us VMAs. Show us Golf Channel. Show us the Kentucky Derby (or) Toddlers and Tiaras."

Moss reveals her marriage to Portlandia star Fred Armisen was 'traumatic'

PAT HEALY
Metro World News in Boston

Mad Men star Elisabeth Moss, 31, really, really, really (and we mean "really") wasn't a fan of her eight-month marriage to Portlandia star Fred Armisen, 47.

"Looking back, I feel like I was really young, and at the time I didn't think that I was that young," Moss said of her relationship with Armisen in her new cover story with New York Magazine. The two divorced each other in 2010. "It was extremely traumatic and awful and horrible," she noted.

Add that to the time she said this about Armisen last year — "One of the greatest things I heard someone say about him is, 'He's so great at doing impersonations. But the greatest impersonation he does is that of a normal person'" — and, well, we don't have to ask her what she really thinks about the whole affair. At least we hope the wedding presents were cool?

Jennifer Aniston

Why Jennifer won't up the world's selfie quotient

Photos of Jennifer Aniston are pretty common, but one thing is for sure: They'll always be shot by someone else, as the former Friends star is definitely not a fan of selfies. "I don't understand them," she tells Self magazine, a magazine title which predates popular culture's embracing of the term "selfie," and a magazine decidedly not dedicated to that form of expression.

"I feel like there's enough out there. Why add to it?" And while she's perfectly comfortable in her own skin, she does have some ideas just in case she's ever allowed to trade bodies with someone else. "I'd love to be able to ski like a crazy person, like Lindsey Vonn," she tells the magazine. "Then I'd also like to have Gisele Bündchen's body, just because, why not?"

Efron looks forward to a High School reunion

Zac Efron isn't about to shy away from his High School Musical roots.

In fact, while his career has clearly grown past the Disney franchise that launched him, Efron reveals that he and his fellow cast-mates are up for a reunion.

"We're all thinking about it," he tells E! News.

"I continue to see all the guys from High School. Every time we do, there's just this look between us. It's so cool because we never forget a single moment of that experience. It brings you right back to those days."

Probiotics to the mental rescue — really

BEST HEALTH MINUTE
Bonnie Munday
Editor-in-Chief
Best Health Magazine

Probiotics — they truly can help you be happy, healthy and slim. In the March-April issue of Best Health magazine, Melissa Greer writes about some of the incredible benefits of probiotics, “the friendly bacteria.”

They are widely known to maintain a healthy digestive system. They also boost immunity and many health-care practitioners recommend you have them daily.

Now, researchers think some probiotics can also improve mental health—and they have even come up with a new term for them: Psychobiotics.

That's because they could produce a health benefit in patients suffering from psychiatric illness, specifically depression or other stress-related disorders.

According to Alan C. Logan, a Connecticut-based naturopathic doctor and co-author of Your Brain on Nature, probiotics help to balance gut microbiota — the bacteria inside our stomach.

“These bacteria do a lot but, most importantly, they protect the gut lining,” he says.

An imbalance of gut microbiota (due to psychological stress or a high-fat, high-sugar diet, for example) can lead to intestinal permeability.

Why is that a bad thing? Because it means parts of the bacteria could pass through the gut lining and into your bloodstream, leading to low-grade inflammation. And that has been connected with obesity, disease — and mental health problems.

The beneficial probiotic strains, and those that are typically found in foods, are members of the lactobacillus and bifidobacterium families, says Logan.

A 2011 study monitored adults who were given either a probiotic product that included lactobacillus and bifidobacteria, or a placebo, every day at breakfast for 30 days. Those who consumed probiotics were found to have lowered stress and anxiety.

It may be unrealistic to expect that probiotics will replace medications in the treatment of depression. But the message for now is that probiotics not only help you avoid obesity and disease—in Logan's opinion, “although more research is needed, probiotics taken in conjunction with a healthy diet and exercise may benefit mental health.”

Study

Happy thoughts lead to better
food choices

Call it the happy meal diet.

A study conducted by Cornell University has found that a person's mood affects what kind and how much food a person consumes. The study was the subject of a paper called Better Moods for Better Eating?: How Mood Influences Food Choice, which was published in the Journal of Consumer Psychology.

"People use food to either maintain a good mood or regain a good mood," said Brian Wansink, a professor at Cornell and co-author of the paper in a release. If you're already in a good mood, you tend to eat more healthfully than if you're in a bad mood."

"Understanding why we make bad food choices in bad moods can help us make better choices," said Meryl P. Gardner, co-author and associate professor at the University of Delaware.

The authors suggest that people in a bad mood may have clouded vision, and may not realize what damage they are doing in the long haul when they overindulge on a given day.

"The takeaway of this study is you can change your mood and eat better. Before a snack or meal, think of something that makes you happy or grateful, and you'll eat less and better" said Wansink. ROBERT

CRISCOLA, METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK CITY

'Pull your sweet tooth' and lose weight with chocolate

PRINZ

Metro World News in New York City

Dr. Will Clower's new book, Eat Chocolate, Lose Weight, claims you can reduce food cravings and learn better eating habits by incorporating a surprisingly healthy food: chocolate.

"Chocolate does a lot of good things for you," Clower says. "I have people eat the chocolate in association with meals. What I've seen is that, when it's applied this way, the overconsumption at the plate is reduced by about half."

The method uses chocolate as a teaching tool to help stop overconsumption. Eating chocolate the right way, as Clower describes, can lead to big diet changes. "The point is when you eat your chocolate to take your time, to let it sit on your tongue, to — and this sounds crazy — actually taste your food," Clower says. "It turns out that when you do that you get something called sensory specific satiety."

That result is a key part of ending overeating at meals. In addition, the chocolate aids in reducing cravings for foods high in sugar using a process Clower calls "pulling your sweet tooth." How is this done? It starts with something Clower calls the Horizontal Taste Test, which helps in adapting one's taste buds to darker chocolates, which have less sugar and more healthy antioxidants. The more cocoa in your chocolate, the better it is for you.

"Americans eat 140 pounds of sugar per person per year," Clower says. "That issue is a massive driver of health problems. So it becomes very important when you're eating your chocolate to use the chocolate to pull your sweet tooth."

Once your sweet tooth is gone, it becomes dramatically easier to make healthier decisions when it comes to eating. "When you pull your sweet tooth and adapt your taste in a direction of darker chocolate, what you find is you just don't have a craving anymore for 140 pounds of sugar," Dr. Clower says. "The things that [people] used to like become too sweet. And when that happens [people] don't want them anymore."

The benefits of chocolate aren't limited to weight loss. High-cocoa chocolate aids many other areas of a healthy lifestyle.

"[Antioxidants] can help to grow the vasculature within muscles," Clower says. "In other words, the little capillaries, little blood vessels, can grow into your muscles." This, in turn, can increase the amount of energy you have throughout the day, your time until exhaustion and your metabolic rate.

"The cascade from the physiological substructural effects all the way up into your life is huge," Clower says. "If you have more energy through the day you're more likely to move, you're more likely to be active. You're less likely to blow off your exercise routine."

The book also contains several different recipes to help beginners get cooking with cocoa. Clower is particularly partial to the book's chili, pecan brownies and dry rub for pork. It turns out you can have your chocolate and eat it too.

The future of butting out

Health officials have begun to predict the end of cigarette smoking in America.

They have long wished for a cigarette-free America, but shied away from calling for smoking rates to fall to zero or near zero by any particular year. The power of tobacco companies and popularity of their products made such a goal seem like a pipe dream.

But a confluence of changes has recently prompted public health leaders to start throwing around phrases like "endgame" and "tobacco-free generation." Now, they talk about the slowly-declining adult smoking rate dropping to 10 per cent in the next decade and to 5 per cent or lower by 2050.

Acting U.S. surgeon general Boris Lushniak recently released a 980-page report on smoking that pushed for stepped up tobacco-control measures. "I can't accept that we're just allowing these numbers to trickle down," he said, in a recent interview with the AP. "We believe we have the public health tools to get us to the zero level."

This is not the first time a federal health official has spoken so boldly. In 1984, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop called for a "smoke-free society" by the year 2000. However, Koop didn't offer specifics on how to achieve such a goal.

"What's different today is that we have policies and programs that have been proven to drive down tobacco use," said Matthew Myers, president of the Campaign for Tobacco Free Kids. "We couldn't say that in 1984."

These developments have made many in public health dream bigger. It's caused Myers' organization and others to tout the goal of bringing the adult smoking rate down to 10 per cent by 2024, from the current 18 per cent. That would mean dropping it at twice the speed it declined over the last 10 years.

The bigger goal is to reduce U.S. smoking-related deaths to fewer than 10,000, from the current level of 480,000. But even if smoking rates dropped to zero immediately, it would take decades to see that benefit, since smoking-triggered cancers can take time to develop.

But while some experts and advocates are swinging for the fences, others are more pessimistic. They say the key to reaching such goals is not simply more taxes and more local smoking bans, but action by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to regulate smoking.

A 2009 federal law gave the FDA the authority to regulate tobacco products. The law barred FDA from outright blocking the sale of cigarettes, but the agency was free to take such pivotal steps as prohibiting the use of appealing menthol flavouring in cigarettes and requiring cigarette makers to ratchet down the amount of addictive nicotine in each smoke.

But nearly five years after gaining power over cigarettes, FDA has yet to even propose such regulations. Agency officials say they're working on it.

Many believe FDA's delay is driven by defence preparations for an anticipated battery of legal and political challenges.

Evaporated Milk? You bet!

NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert
DHN, RNCP
myfriendinfood.com

OK, maybe I am a survivalist preparing for the zombie apocalypse. So what if I still have my Y2K water stored in the basement? You have to have a just-in-case plan!

If it is only one more blimey weeknight meal you need to survive, I have got you covered — evaporated milk. Yup.

This stuff is shelf stable for years, can be used in baking when mixed half and half with water, and it replaces milk in any recipe.

Use it for that fussy friend who only likes cream in his coffee if you are a skim milk kind of keeper.

It can also go the other way and make a savoury cream sauce for pasta or to top vegetables.

Still fortified with vitamin D, it has twice the calcium and protein as regular milk but is less expensive and less perishable.

Honestly, you can't really go wrong having a couple of cans on hand.

Just be sure you aren't picking up a can of sweetened condensed milk because that is also made by heating and evaporating milk but it is also laden with sugar.

We can debate the "go dairy free, everyone's allergic to it" concept and the "calcium isn't absorbable from dairy" idea later.

For now, you have to make something for dinner and have very little going on in the fridge and with inspiration. Melt one tablespoon butter, whisk in one tablespoon flour, add a can of creamy magic and season if and as you wish. Just don't boil it! Unlike cream, it can't take the heat.

You know you love pasta with cream sauce — everyone does. But the carbs and calories, oye!

This quick dish gives you that deep, warm, creamy pleasure without all the guilt. It comes together in a snap.

Evaporated milk delivers twice the calcium and protein of the same amount of whole milk. It is creamy but much lower in fat and calories.

You can't lose with this quick weeknight vegetarian meal.

If you don't have the spaghetti squash, just make pasta and call it a day.

1. Pierce squash with a fork and place in microwave on a plate. Cook for 15-18 minutes until quite soft. When cooked, slice open carefully to let steam escape.

2. Meanwhile, heat a large skillet; add 1 tsp of butter and quickly brown mushrooms over high heat, set aside.

3. In the same skillet, turn heat to medium, melt the rest of the butter and whisk in flour, stirring until it bubbles and starts to brown.

Ingredients

- 1 small spaghetti squash
- 1 tbsp butter
- 8 oz sliced mushroom
- 1 1/2 tbsp flour
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 can evaporated milk

- 1 tsp freshly ground black pepper
- salt, to taste
- pinch dried chili flakes
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

4. Stir in garlic and cook for 30 seconds and then whisk in evaporated milk. Whisk until it thickens 2-4 minutes over medium-high heat. Do not boil!

5. Scoop out seeds from squash and discard. Pull fibres with a fork and stir into creamy sauce. Add pepper, salt and chili flakes, top with cheese.

Pass the chickpeas and pasta

This large vegetarian salad, featuring chickpeas (also known as garbanzo beans), would be great on its own for lunch or as a side dish for dinner.

The recipe is easily cut in half.

1. In a large bowl, combine pasta, chickpeas, celery, carrots, red peppers, green onions and feta. Toss lightly to mix well. Add dressing and toss to coat well. (Make ahead: Pasta mixture can be prepared a day in advance. Refrigerate overnight and toss with dressing before serving.) THE CANADIAN PRESS/PULSECANADA.COM

THE HEART OF THE MATTER

YOUR CHOLESTEROL: BY THE NUMBERS

What's your cholesterol IQ?

You should know your cholesterol level if you're a man older than 40, a post-menopausal woman, you are overweight, smoke, have diabetes, or if heart disease runs in your family.

Cholesterol, a type of fat made in the liver, is also present in some of the foods you eat. Your body uses cholesterol to build cells, aid in digestion, and produce hormones. But too much of the bad cholesterol LDL (low density lipoprotein) can build up in artery walls over time, forming a plaque. This plaque buildup can block the flow of oxygen-rich blood to your heart and brain, raising risks for a heart attack or stroke.

Canadian doctors like to get LDL cholesterol levels down to 2 millimoles per litre (mmol/L), but a worrisome number of Canadians don't meet that target. In fact, according to Statistics Canada, about 40 per cent of Canadians aged 40 to 59 have high LDL levels.

Middle-aged men should be regularly screened as should older women. According to Canadian practice guidelines, anyone with an LDL of 5 mmol/L or greater, as well as those who have already had a heart attack or stroke, or diabetics 40 years old and older, are typically prescribed a cholesterol lowering drug called a statin.

If you aren't in one of these high-risk categories, and your levels aren't checked, you may not even know you have high cholesterol because there are few symptoms.

The good news is that along with elevated blood pressure, cholesterol is a modifiable risk factor for heart disease, so you can take steps to control your levels. A common strategy is to follow a low-fat diet; you might also consider adding a daily dose of Metamucil — in powder or capsule form — which has been proven to lower mildly to moderately elevated cholesterol levels when accompanied by a low-fat diet.

Other tips include avoiding foods high in saturated and trans fats, choosing foods such as nuts, seeds and beans containing plant sterols that help control blood cholesterol, taking up physical activities, and being smoke-free.

HOW TO TAME YOUR TUMMY TROUBLE

Do you have a gassy gut? A tender tummy? Or a bloated belly?

If so, you aren't alone. About 80 per cent of the population sometimes gets bloated, suffers from excess gas or wind, or has altered bowel habits, according to Dr. Richard Hunt, professor, emeritus, McMaster University, Hamilton, and founder and vice-president, Canadian Digestive Health Foundation.

The symptoms could be a sign of a potentially serious disorder such as irritable bowel syndrome (IBS), but, more likely, it's your gut telling you to change your diet.

Here are some easy-to-follow tips to ease the discomfort.

- Drink lots of water, while cutting down on alcoholic, caffeinated and sugar-rich beverages.
- Watch your fat intake. Stick to fish or low-fat meats like chicken or turkey or lean cuts of beef. Avoid fried foods and those containing trans fats
- Boost your fibre intake. You can get plenty from the No. 1 doctor recommended fibre brand Metamucil (Source: Health Care Analytics, 2012); it promotes digestive health by relieving irregularity.
- Choose the right carbs. Choose easily digestible carbohydrates such as potatoes, rice and bananas, and limit more difficult-to-digest carbs like beans, broccoli and cabbage.
- Experiment with probiotics. In the natural health product Align, probiotics provide live bacteria that form part of the natural healthy intestinal flora. This can help to relieve symptoms of IBS such as abdominal discomfort, gas and bloating. Align has 10 years of research behind it and is the No. 1 gastroenterologist recommended probiotic in the U.S., among gastroenterologists who recommended a brand of probiotic in a Symphony Health Solutions 2013 survey.

- Eat smaller, more frequent meals. Also avoid large meals, especially right before bed
- Limit sodium, sugar and artificial sweeteners. Your tummy — and your heart — will thank you.

There are other lifestyle habits you could adopt, including being active, achieving a healthy body weight, being smoke-free, and controlling stressors in your life.

These products may not be right for you. Always read and follow the label.

DOUBLE WHAMMY

For a healthy heart and a stable stomach, try these top four strategies.

- Eat well. Aim for a low-fat diet with lots of easily digestible fruits and vegetables plus whole grains.
- Consume more fibre. Fibre, especially the soluble type, can help lower cholesterol levels. Adults older than 18 years old should aim to get at least 21-38 grams of total dietary fibre every day. For a quick fibre boost, dissolve a dose of your favourite flavour of Metamucil into your morning juice or smoothie.
- Get active. For adults 18-64 years old, experts recommend at least 150 minutes of moderate to vigorous aerobic exercise every week, in bouts of 10 minutes or more.
- Stop smoking. Smoking increases LDL blood cholesterol and the habit is unhealthy to just about every other part of the body.

Toronto police say there's no indication a 20-year-old Ontario Hockey League player with a Michigan team who's been reported missing has entered Canada.

Hockey Night In Canada. Don Cherry vows Coach's Corner segment will continue its past formula

JESSICA SMITH CROSS
Metro in Toronto

Don Cherry made a few things clear on Monday: No one tells him what to do, he'll never change and Hockey Night In Canada should be always aired on the CBC.

Rogers announced Monday that George Stroumboulopoulos will be the new host of Hockey Night in Canada and that Cherry will continue on Coach's Corner with Ron MacLean, who will also have an expanded role hosting the Hometown Hockey Community Celebration on Sunday night.

Sportsnet's Daren Millard will host Wednesday Night Hockey and Jeff Marek, also of Sportsnet, will host Thursday Night Hockey and Friday Night Hockey.

While CBC will air HNIC on Saturdays, Rogers maintains control and the profits. Rogers will carry 500 regular-season games across 13 networks and seven platforms, plus the playoffs including the Stanley Cup Final.

Asked what he thinks of the "new team" he'll be working with, Cherry said he wasn't too sure yet and offered an anecdote about posing for a Rogers photographer, alongside the other hockey media personalities a few minutes earlier.

"It's strange for me to have that photographer say, 'You stand there,' and I look back to Hockey Night in Canada and Ron, and it's like, 'Would you move? I'm not used to being told what to do,' he said. "I'm not about to be told now what to do.

"It does seem strange. It hasn't hit me yet. They said you have to take that picture, I said what picture — it's for Rogers."

One thing Grapes says he does know is Coach's Corner won't change.

"Never," he said. "After all these years I don't know how to change, to tell you the truth."

Grapes said he'd like to see HNIC aired on CBC because of the broadcaster's mandate for nationwide coverage.

Much of the new HNIC has roots in the CBC — the show itself, Stroumboulopoulos and the Rogers VP in charge of the deal, Scott Moore.

Cherry was asked what he thinks that says about the state of public and private broadcasting in Canada.

"I don't know about that, I'm not that clever," he said. "I know they (Rogers) paid a lot of money for the thing, so it must be doing something right."

Stroumboulopoulos said he'll be hosting from a fan's perspective and facilitating conversations, and won't be offering expert analysis.

"I didn't play the game at the level of champion, so I wouldn't offer the advice of a guy who played NHL hockey," he said. "I couldn't even make a minor team."

Stroumboulopoulos got his start as a sports reporter and he's been a Habs fan since he was five when "the Habs were good — which quickly went away," he said.

Canadian juniors set to fly with Blue Jays

The Canadian junior baseball team will face off against Brett Lawrie, a graduate of the team, and the Blue Jays on Tuesday. KATHY WILLENS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Playing any major-league squad is memorable for the Canadian junior baseball team but Tuesday's date with the Toronto Blue Jays is extra special.

Major-league teams provide a variety of opposition against the Canadian juniors, with many fielding prospects. The Jays take it a lot more seriously than most.

Jays expected to figure in the game include Canadian Brett Lawrie, Adam Lind and Munenori Kawasaki and pitchers Brandon Morrow and Steve Delabar, among others.

"That's truly a split squad. They're all big-league camp guys," said Greg Hamilton, head coach of the juniors and Baseball Canada's director of national teams. "The other clubs that we're playing, they wouldn't be all big-league camp guys."

Tuesday's game is a partnership with the Jays, who will also bring in a lot of the Canadians in their organization.

Roll of the dice helps McKeever win gold medal

Cross-country skiing. Visually impaired Alberta athlete reaps reward of swapping guides earlier than he had planned to Brian McKeever decided to take a gamble and the payoff was Canada's first gold medal at the Sochi Paralympics.

The cross-country skier won the men's 20-kilometre visually impaired event Monday thanks in part to a risky move at the midway point of the race. The eight-time Paralympic gold medallist — who has been battling a virus since arriving in Russia last week — started with guide Erik Carleton before switching to alternate Graham Nishikawa at the 10-kilometre mark amid sloppy conditions and warm temperatures.

It was a play McKeever had never before attempted in competition.

"Today was great," said McKeever. "It was really tough. Being sick last week made it hard and definitely made us a little nervous. It was huge team effort having two guides out there sharing the work. It was definitely needed. They were the ones that got me through today because I couldn't have done that on my own."

"The snow being what it was, it was much faster to be in behind. Those guys were, unfortunately for them, working pretty damn hard."

The 34-year-old from Canmore, Alta., finished in a time of 52 minutes 37.1 seconds with the help of a plan he devised with his coach and brother Robin.

The idea was for Carleton to guide the first 12 kilometres before giving way to Nishikawa. But when Carleton began to fade earlier than expected, Nishikawa stepped in to finish the job and lead McKeever to a victory of more than a minute over Russia's Stanislav Chokhlaev. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Blame lifted from dead skicross racer

Canadian skicross racer Nik Zoricic was killed two years ago in a crash during a World Cup event. JONATHAN HAYWARD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The family of a Canadian skicross racer killed two years ago at a World Cup event feels vindicated now that sport authorities no longer blame him for the tragedy and instead have made safety improvements to course design, their lawyer said Monday.

Lawyer Tim Danson said the family of Nik Zoricic feels his legacy has become something positive and to be celebrated.

"We were not prepared to accept that Nik was responsible for his own death," Danson told The Canadian Press.

"We just wanted the truth to be acknowledged."

In the immediate aftermath of his fatal crash at an event in Grindelwald, Switzerland, on March 10, 2012, ski officials angered the family and others in the skiing community by suggesting Zoricic, 29, was to blame for his death.

The family responded by arguing the death was "entirely avoidable" and blasted the course finish line for being a "death trap."

In a letter to his parents this month, the International Ski Federation called Zoricic a "talented, experienced, and skilled" World Cup skier who did not take unnecessary risks.

"It would therefore not be right to describe his accident as a 'freak accident' or 'pilot error,'" the federation's president and secretary general wrote.

The letter further states that the federation has updated its safety guidelines and beefed up the staff and experts who help organizers construct a course and its safety measures.

Fatal crash

Nik Zoricic was competing in his 36th event in Grindelwald when he was killed at the finish line of a tight three-way race.

- He was travelling 90 km/h when he veered to the right after the final jump, landing about a metre to the right of the official course line in "crud" rather than on a groomed shoulder.
- He snagged safety netting and tumbled into hard-packed snow, smashing his head.

Luongo sees potential stars in Jonathan Huberdeau, Nick Bjugstad and a handful more young players around the locker-room. At 34 years old, he wants to contribute to the revival of the franchise rather than riding coattails. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

A relationship that has been okay in the past will turn difficult today. There may be no apparent reason why it has suddenly gone sour but don't make an issue of it. Most likely it is just a passing phase.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Base partnerships, both personal and professional, on mutual respect, because if you try to take liberties with friends, loved ones or work colleagues today you may pay dearly for it.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

This is a good time for creative activities, especially those where some sort of communication is concerned. Make sure you spell out what you are trying to say. Not everyone possesses your brain power.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

This can be and should be one of the most productive times of the year. The harder you work at making your dreams come true the quicker you will reach your goals.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Try not to worry about personal or money problems. The cosmic picture suggests that your state of mind will be much more positive after next weekend's full moon.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

You will be in a serious mood today as Mercury, your ruler, squares up to Saturn. Things you once believed in will be called into question and so-called "facts" will no longer stand up. It's time to get real.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

The past few weeks have been tough and the next 24 hours is likely to bring challenges too, but nothing will happen that you don't have the intelligence and the courage to overcome.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

The message of the stars for you today is that you must not start worrying for no good reason. The challenges that come your way over the next few days will be tough but you are ten times tougher.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You are where you are for a reason, so don't start complaining that you would rather be some place else. No matter what occurs over the next 24 hours you can be sure to benefit in the long-term.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Many of the restrictions you have been labouring under in recently will get worse for a while. A crisis point will be reached for the 16th's full moon after which they will fade.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Changes on the work front may not be what you were hoping for but later in the year you will realize they were exactly what you needed, so don't be too negative about them. You'll move up soon.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Be careful what you agree to over the next 24 hours because the planets warn you don't have all the facts. Don't accept what other people tell you simply because they look good and sound honest.
